Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Life, Character, and Literary Labours of Samuel Drew, A M Conscious of the lesson contained in his personal history, it was Mr. Drew s intention to become his own biographer. Not many months before his decease, he said to a relative, Should God spare me to return in health to Cornwall, I intend to employ my leisure hours in writing some account of my life, and leave it for others to publish when I am gone. Those who have read the Life of the late Dr. Adam Clarke, will recollect, that he assigns as a moving cause of his valuable auto-biographical sketch, the importunity of a friend. That friend was Samuel Drew; and the fact was afterwards alleged, as a reason why Mr. D. should no longer hazard the writing of his own memoirs upon the contingency of life. In reference to some auto-biography of yourself, writes a member of Dr. Clarke s family, this is not the first time I have entreated you, nor will it be the last, till I know that you are attending to the suggestion.
